Matthew Stubbs and the Antiguas

Artist:
Matthew Stubbs and the Antiguas
Non-Airable Tracks:
NONE
Label:
Self-Release

Psychedelic Rock band, Matthew Stubbs and the Antiguas just started performing in 2016. This album sounds like a score to a movie. Which I guess is what they were going for so … nailed it? Because this album is so score-like I don’t know for what occasion you would play this ever. It’s definitely background music. It honestly reminds me of the Lost Episode of Spongebob where there is only a cycle of walking sequences. Now that said, it has a really good sound. It can be repetitive at times and is mainly lead by a high-pitched guitar in each song. There is no singing, which definitely adds to the score-like element. Most of the tracks remind me of a montage in a film. However the artistry and execution of the music is very well done.

Sounds Like:
A Tarentino Movie
Recommended Tracks:
5 John Doe: Trippy intro but great guitar.
7 Del Diablo: Great guitar throughout.

Name:
Natty Trujillo
Date Reviewed:
02/21/2018

- movie score? [1]
- psychedelic rock? [2]
- World-jazz? [3]