Flowers In The Spring

Artist:
The Molochs
Non-Airable Tracks: NONE
Label: Innovative Leisure

The Molochs latest effort starts out sounding like a brief ode to the easy going, yet catchy rhythms of 90s Alt acts married with a somewhat vintage sound reminiscent of 1960s ballad makers.

Track #2, "I Wanna Say To You" sounds like a summertime song with a rhythm as simple sounding as any of Oasis's songs off their masterpiece album "What's The Story Morning Glory". Most notably the rhyme on "Wonderwall". I love this song as much as I loved that band's music in the 90s.

Track #3 sounds very ballad-like with an upbeat rhythm that sounds like the songs your parents would listen to at a Sadie Hawkins dance or any other social-mating ritual in the 1960s.

Track #5 starts out as hook-ridden as a teenage anthem and makes you want to sing: la-la-la along with the chorus. It's rhythm sounds like an infusion of pop with folk and compliments the lyrics as well as any 90s song that talked about Teen angst in a sing-song style. It sounds like: "Da da da da da da da. Na Na. In the story life I am old...

Track #9 plays like any catchy Blink-182 song with sing-a-long lyrics combined with pop-ridden guitar riffs. The greatest example of this similarity would be the track "First Date".

After listening to this entire album I am left agreeing with the promoter of this album's recommendations. I also completely agree with the LA Times review when they say: "The Molochs are on their own trip, one that spins old ideas with new energy." I will recommend this album to anyone that feels like their musical taste transcends diversified decades.

Sounds Like:
90s Alt acts
Sounds Like:
A somewhat vintage sound reminiscent of 1960s ballad makers.
Sounds Like:
A summertime song with a rhythm as simple sounding as any of Oasis's songs off their masterpiece album "What's The Story Morning Glory". Most notably the rhythm on "Wonderwall".
Sounds Like:
Very ballad-like with an upbeat rhythm that sounds like the songs your parents would listen to at a Sadie Hawkins dance or any other social-mating ritual in the 1960s.
Sounds Like:
As hook-ridden as a teenage anthem and makes you want to sing: la-la-la along with the chorus.
Sounds Like:
An infusion of pop with folk and compliments the lyrics as well as any 90s song that talked about Teen angst in a sing-song style. It sounds like: "Da da da da da da da da. Na Na. In the story life I am old...
Sounds Like:
Any catchy Blink-182 song with sing-a-long lyrics combined with pop-ridden guitar riffs. The greatest example of this similarity would be the track "First Date".

Recommended Tracks:
Track #1: To Kick A Lover's Door
Track #2: "I Wanna Say To You"
Track #3: A Little Glimpse of Death
Track #5: Flowers In The Spring
Track #8: And She's Sleeping ****
Track #9: Too Lost In Love *****
Track #12: All The Things That Happen To Me

Name:
Jon S. Rice
Date Reviewed:
09/12/2018

• Alt [1]
• Indie Rock [2]